BCP Global Artificial Intelligence (AI) Kick-Out Bond 2

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is a branch of computer science dealing with the simulation of intelligent behaviour in computers, such as learning and problem solving. AI is seen as a long term investment theme whereby companies that are developing and providing AI related products and services are seen as forward thinking innovators that should outperform as advanced technology becomes an even more important feature across a variety of sectors from telecommunications and manufacturing to finance, healthcare and agriculture. According to research from Accenture, by 2035 AI has the power to increase global productivity by 40% or more.

The Index underlying this Bond is comprised of companies that have been identified as being active and innovative in AI by reference to the volume of patents granted to that company that are AI related.

- This is a 100 stock Index that is rebalanced quarterly and each selected stock receives an equal 1% weight
- The Index employs a patent screening process that looks back over the previous 3 years of AI related patents granted to a company
- Each company is given an AI score related to how important AI is within the company itself and how much that company contributes to AI innovation globally
- Companies are included in the Index if they own significant AI-related intellectual property
- Dividends paid by companies in the Index are reinvested and then a synthetic fixed dividend of 5% pa is deducted from the total return
- There are no regional or sector constraints to company selection but backtested data has illustrated a high weighting to US companies and to the Technology sector
